yat Khan recording in Bombay. She plays an English girl taken with Eastern mysticism. Right, Marlon Brando as a guru engages in levitation in the motion-picture version of Terry Sothorn's Candy.
